BRAZIL'S INDUSTRIAL HEALTH COMPLEX INITIATIVE SIGNS AGREEMENTS TO ENHANCE HEALTH INFRASTRUCTURE

Recent technology transfers between local and international laboratories call for medical innovation

BRASÍLIA, Brazil (October 8, 2010) – Brazil's Ministry of Health has recently announced agreements with nine international laboratories to improve its Health Industrial Complex, aimed at developing Brazil's overall health infrastructure and medical industry. The agreements, facilitated in conjunction with the Ministry of Health's Oswaldo Cruz Foundation (Fiocruz), continue to advance Brazil's global leadership in medical technology and innovation.

Some years ago, the Brazilian Ministry of Health established its Health Industrial Complex initiative, a program to drive investment and partnerships with Brazil's private sector in order to develop the production of medication and medical equipment in Brazil.

Today, Brazil's health sector represents 8 percent of Brazil's gross domestic product, generating nearly US$ 95 billion per year and employing 10 percent of the Brazilian population. The country's dependency on imported technology led the sector's trade balance to a US$ 7 billion deficit.

Investment in the Health Industrial Complex is channeled not only toward research, but also toward the infrastructure of medical manufacturing facilities. Between 2009 and 2012, the Ministry of Health will invest nearly US$ 208 million in infrastructure for these units, which represents an average of US$ 52.07 million per year, almost three times as much as the annual average investment of the previous five years.

A major agreement was recently established by FioCruz and a Ukrainian laboratory, Indar, to produce insulin. An investment of US$ 100 million was made to further the scientific development of insulin production and for the construction of a factory. The first shipment of products was distributed in Brazil in 2008, and in 2009, two additional companies registered insulin in Brazil, totaling five companies active in this growing business in the country. Since 2009, the Ministry of Health has acquired 13.5 million vials of insulin per year. With 7.5 million diagnosed diabetics in Brazil, these investments in medical research and infrastructure have allowed Brazilians to pay the lowest price globally for a human insulin vial in 2009, equal to an estimated savings of US$ 17 million.

During a visit to London by Brazil's Minister of Health, José Gomes Temporão, FioCruz reached an agreement totaling US$ 95 million with international pharmaceutical company GlaxoSmithKline to develop new vaccines to fight dengue, malaria and yellow fever. The investment will be applied to the creation of a FioCruz Center for Research and Development, and will promote new technologies for the prevention and treatment of dengue, malaria and yellow fever. It is the first alliance of its kind, between a multinational company and a public laboratory, where each will finance one half of the forecasted resources.

The Ministry of Health has continued to foster major agreements for additional technology transfers between local and international laboratories. In a recent visit to China, Minister Temporão coordinated a technology transfer agreement between Brazil's largest pharmaceutical laboratory, EMS, and Chinese pharmaceutical laboratory Shanghai Biomabs to produce six revolutionary biotechnology products in Brazil. Among the new products are monoclonal antibodies, which are biological medications used for the costly treatment of serious diseases, including various forms of cancer, rheumatoid arthritis, and osteoporosis, among others.

Below is a full list of agreements and their details:

Qiagen (Germany)

Description: A technology transfer agreement between Brazilian laboratory Bio-Manguinhos (a FioCruz unit) and Qiagen, for the production of diagnostic tests to detect HIV/HCV in molecular platforms through the extraction of RNA through local blood center samples.

This project, initiated by the Secretariat of Health Attention and the Ministry of Health, through the General Coordination of Blood and Blood Derivatives, aims to provide high-sensitivity tests with a significant reduction of the immunological phase time of the two diseases.

Date of Agreement: April 30, 2009

Status of Agreement: The agreement was implemented in 2010 and the multi-center study is in progress. An estimated 480,000 tests will be conducted by the end of the agreement.

Chembio (United States)

Confirmatory Immunoblot DPP HIV 1/2 Quick Test (Additive)

Description: An agreement between FioCruz and Chembio, an American diagnostic testing company, which aims to determine areas of improvement for the Confirmatory Immunoblot DPP HIV 1/2 Quick Test, which detects HIV 2 infection.

In addition, this agreement aims to replace the traditional immunofluorescence diagnosis produced by Bio-Manguinhos, and can be used in the two new algorithms in conjunction with the AIDS, STD and Viral Hepatitis programs.

Note: All agreements between FioCruz and Chembio have been mediated by the Unit of Bio-Manguinhos.

Date of Agreement: May 15, 2009

Status of Agreement: The agreement is undergoing the registration process with The National Health Surveillance Agency (Anvisa), with approval expected by the end of 2010. An estimated 100,000 tests have been shipped in 2010.

Canine Visceral Leishmaniasis DPP Quick Test

Description: A technology transfer agreement between Bio-Manguinhos and Chembio, which transfers all technical information related to DPP technology, thus enabling the manufacturing process to take place in Brazil, and the Ministry of Health to facilitate the distribution.

Date of Agreement: January 28, 2008

Status of Agreement: The agreement is undergoing the registration process with Anvisa, with approval expected by the end of 2010. An estimated 500,000 tests have been shipped in 2010.

Genzyme

Description: An agreement between Bio-Manguinhos and Chembio, which calls for cooperation to develop modern therapy mechanisms for neglected diseases, including chagas, leishmaniasis, malaria and fibrosis, and for cell therapy and regenerative medicine.

Date of Agreement: July 23, 2007

Status of Agreement: The agreement will expire on the date that the work plan is concluded.

Cipla Ltd. (India)

A technology transfer agreement between Farmanguinhos (a FioCruz unit) and Cipla Ltd., for the formulation of Artesunate-Mefloquine, to develop a treatment of malaria.

Date of Agreement: The agreement took place between 2003 and 2008

Lupin (India)

Description: An agreement between Farmanguinhos and Lupin for the production of tuberculostatic medicine, including Isoniazid, Rifampicin, Ethambutol and Pyrazinamide.

Glaxo Smithkline (United Kingdom)

Dengue

Description: The agreement, signed between Glaxo Smithkline and Bio-Manguinhos, is aimed to facilitate the collaborative development of a purified, inactivated vaccine to fight against dengue. The vaccine will be used and distributed by the Ministry of Health's National Immunization Program (PNI).

Date of Agreement: August, 17, 2009

Pneumococcus Vaccine

Description: A technology transfer agreement between Bio-Manguinhos and Glaxo Smithkline for the production of a vaccine to fight against Streptococcus Pneumoniae 10. The vaccine will be used and distributed by the Ministry of Health's National Immunization Program (PNI).

Date of Agreement: August 17, 2009

Status of Agreement: In 2009, 420,000 doses were distributed, and an additional 13 million doses will be distributed by the end of 2010 to PNI.

Rotavirus

A technology transfer agreement between Bio-Manguinhos and Glaxo Smithkline for Rotavirus, a vaccine that fights against rubella, measles and mumps.

Indar (Ukraine)

A technology transfer agreement signed in 2006, between Farmanguinhos and Indar for the production of Human Recombinant Insulin.

Heber Biotech S.A. (Cuba)

Description: A technology transfer agreement signed in 2004, between Bio-Manguinhos and Cuba-based Heber Biotech S.A., for the production of Human Recombinant Interferon Alpha 2b. The agreement was signed in conjunction with the Center for Genetic Engineering and Biotechnology (CIGB).

Status of Agreement: 2008 marked the agreement's concluding stage for production of the active pharmaceutical ingredient, including quality control of the cell bank.

The joint development of PEGylated Interferon Alpha 2b began with the first phase of the testing of rats. In the second phase of development, Bio-Manguinhos completed pre-clinical studies in primates. If positive results are achieved, the clinical studies of phase 1 will take place during the final months of 2010.

Cimab S.A (Cuba)

Description: A technology transfer agreement signed in 2004, between Cimab S.A. and the Center for Molecular Immunology (CIM) for the production of Human Recombinant Epoetin Alpha.

Status of Agreement: In 2008, the project concluded its second phase with the absorption of the formulation process.

BRAZIL ANNOUNCES THREE NEW INITIATIVES TO ADVANCE CLIMATE CHANGE POLICY AND REDUCE NATIONAL CARBON FOOTPRINT

President Lula states Brazil is on track to meet carbon reduction targets four years earlier than promised

BRASILIA (October 26, 2010) – At the meeting of Brazil's Forum on Climate Change today, President Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva announced three new initiatives geared toward measuring and lowering Brazil's national greenhouse gas emissions. These initiatives, which all fall under the framework of Brazil's national policy on climate change and help meet the voluntary commitments Brazil made at the 15th United Nations Climate Change Conference (COP15), include: developing the Second National Communication to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCC), signing a decree establishing rules for the National Fund on Climate Change, and setting guidelines and strategic actions to lower the greenhouse gas emissions of five specific industry sectors.

In his address to the Forum, President Lula congratulated the inter-governmental group on their efforts to advance Brazil's move toward a low-carbon economy, stating: "Today's announcement shows once again that Brazil can be proud of the environmental agenda we have been building in recent years. Since 2003, we have been working closely to address climate change, and even with strong economic growth, our actions have already resulted in a reduction of 2.8 billion tons of carbon dioxide."

"If we keep this pace – and everything indicates that we shall do so – we will accomplish our goal of voluntary carbon dioxide reductions in 2016, four years before we had promised," he added.

Over the last seven years, Brazil has reduced the rate of deforestation in the Amazon by more than 70 percent, reducing emissions by 2.9 billion tCO₂eq (tons of carbon equivalent). These figures are above and beyond the voluntary commitments made by Brazil at COP15 held in Copenhagen last year.

Second National Communication Provides Updated National Inventory of Greenhouse Gas Emissions

Brazil's Second National Communication to the UNFCC, submitted today, is significant because it provides an updated national inventory of greenhouse gas emissions detailing the breakdown of Brazil's overall carbon footprint by economic sector from 1990-2005. This inventory is a powerful tool to help define sector-specific actions to lower greenhouse gasses under the National Policy on Climate Change. More than 600 institutions and some 1,200 experts from various sectors – energy, industrial, forestry, agriculture, and waste treatment – were mobilized for its preparation.

The Second National Communication is a follow-up to the original communication Brazil submitted in 2004 in commitment to the UNFCC, detailing the status of national measures to fight climate change. The Second Communication inventory provides data for five years further than the reporting period established by the guidelines of the Convention, which was 1990-2000.

FNMC Decree Establishes Steering Committee to Manage Allocation of Financial Resources

Another significant development was the signing of a decree determining the rules for the National Fund on Climate Change (FNMC), which established a steering committee to manage, monitor and evaluate the allocation of financial resources for national projects, studies and actions to mitigate and adapt to climate change and its effects. This steering committee will consist of representatives from the Brazilian government, scientific community, entrepreneurs, workers and non-governmental organizations.

The FNMC allows existing federal resources as well as those allocated by the Law of Petroleum to be used to fund national climate change programs. In addition to funds from the special participation in the profits of the oil production chain, the FNMC may receive funds from other sources, including international resources, including those that may be established under the Climate Convention. The initial FNMC budget estimated for 2011 is US$ 132 million (R$ 226 million).

Executive Summary of Sector-Specific Plans for Mitigation

The Brazilian government also announced the development of executive summaries for five sector-specific plans to lower emissions by fighting deforestation in the Amazon and Cerrado regions and through reforms in the energy, agriculture and steelmaking sectors. Each executive summary consists of a brief description of commitments, methodologies, guidelines and strategic actions to tackle climate change.

These summaries will be submitted to the Forum for further discussion in a meeting to be held in November.

Setting a Foundation for COP16

The initiatives announced today at the annual meeting of the Brazilian Forum on Climate Change will set the foundation for Brazil's strategy for the 16th United Nations Climate Change Conference (COP16), scheduled to take place in Cancun, Mexico, from November 29 to December 10, 2010.

"Today, Brazil is certainly one of the countries that has presented the most concrete results in tackling climate change," said President Lula.

BRAZIL INVESTS OVER US$ 1.4 BILLION IN INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION PROJECTS FROM 2005-2009

BRASÍLIA, Brazil (Jan. 24, 2011) - The Brazilian government invested over US$ 1.43 billion in international aid and cooperative projects between 2005 and 2009, as confirmed by the results of a survey conducted by Brazil's Institute of Applied Economic Research (IPEA). The study reveals that the value of these investments nearly doubled from US$ 158.0 million in 2005 to over US$ 362.0 million in 2009.

The majority of the dollars invested were allocated to international organizations and regional banks, which received 76.1 percent of the total investment; 14 percent was allocated to international humanitarian aid and projects to promote technological innovation; and 10 percent to scholarships.

Countries in Latin America and the Caribbean were the top recipients of the resources, receiving 76 percent of total humanitarian aid and 35 percent of the total funds invested to promote technological innovation. Notably, the results reveal that investment in international humanitarian aid and projects to promote technical innovation appreciated significantly, from US$ 17.29 million in 2005 to US$ 110.55 million in 2009.

The Brazilian government's contribution to international organizations also appreciated during this time period, from nearly US$ 179.47 million to over US$ 296.13 million. International sources of financing for developing countries, including the Inter-American Development Bank, the World Bank and the African Development Bank received 37 percent of investments allocated to international organizations and regional banks.

In addition, more than US$ 257.24 of investment in international organizations was dedicated to the countries of the Southern Cone Market (MERCOSUL). The Brazilian government also contributes approximately 70 percent of the annual resources of its Structural Convergence Fund (FOCEM) to MERCOSUL (FOCEM was established in 2004 and aims to develop and promote the economic and trade leadership of MERCOSUL).

The IPEA survey also presents statistics on Brazilian government operations for peacekeeping, totaling over US$ 367.0 million from 2005 to 2009. The survey also details investment for refugee relief, which supports over 4,200 refugees from approximately 76 countries that currently live in Brazil.

IPEA partnered with the Brazilian Ministry of Foreign Affairs Cooperation Agency (ABC), with the support of the staff to the President, to compile the survey results. The data was also compiled in conjunction with over 60 governmental agencies and entities linked directly to the federal government.
