Dear Secretary Hall,

As you know, I have been appointed as the Icelandic Ambassador to the United States.

I am delighted with this posting and am looking forward to enhancing the historic relationship between our two nations. A fundamental cornerstone of this relationship is the mutual membership of our two nations in NATO and the bilateral defense treaty of 1951.

Since Iceland does not have a military, we do not have the same level of expertise that most nations with military forces and embassies in the United States have. This places my Embassy and me at a disadvantage with respect to the myriad of defense policies emanating from the Department of Defense and other defense-related institutions.

I would therefore like to invite you to become a personal advisor to me on all defense matters and policies of the United States.

You, among all your colleagues, both civilian and military, are ideally suited for providing me the needed advice and counsel. This is based on your extensive military operational experience in Iceland during your years of postings in the country, your service as the U.S. and NATO Commander of the Icelandic Defense forces, your service as the Chief Negotiator for the removal of all U.S. forces from Iceland in 2006 and finally, your exceptional knowledge of the Icelandic People and the defense policies of the Government of Iceland.

The proposed contract for this policy advice is contained in attachment (a) to this letter. The contract will not be in force until your service in this capacity is approved by the United States Secretary of the Navy.

Sincerely,

Geir H. Haarde
Ambassador
