While the foregoing individuals will comprise the core team for SINOPEC, it can and will be augmented by others of similar rank with divergent expertise as required and agreed by both Parties. Mark Cowan will be responsible for management of day to day work. Lynn Tian will be responsible to supervise the team effort and coordinate our activities with respect to SINOPEC.

Global Strategies has been honored to work with you throughout the past year and look forward to continuing our engagement working on Sinopec's behalf in Washington D.C. and the broader United States. As discussed, we have provided below a summary of our previous activities, issues which Sinopec needs to watch for in the coming year and the work plan for the next contract period starting on May 1, 2017.

I. PREVIOUS DELIVERABLES

During the contract period of May 1, 2016 – April 30, 2017, Global Strategies provided the following services to Sinopec D.C.:

1. REPORTING & ANALYSIS: Global Strategies provided Sinopec with regular weekly reporting covering legislative developments, regulatory issues, mergers and acquisitions, political developments as well as other matters which will or could have an effect on Sinopec’s business interests in the energy sector. These reports have included an analysis of the matters as well as indications of the potential impact on Sinopec’s operations and why Sinopec should be aware of certain events. In the past year, Global Strategies has also added more analysis of macroeconomics in the United States – reporting on the performance of economic sectors, the actions of the Federal Reserve and important developments regarding trade. GS also provided analysis of developments during the presidential and congressional elections in the weekly reports. Further, Global Strategies provided real time updates on news items when applicable and answers to specific market- and policy-related questions from Sinopec.

2. SITUATIONAL REPORTS: Global Strategies provided three special reports to Sinopec during the reporting period – in May 2016, Global Strategies provided a report covering the Energy Policy Modernization Act, outlining the process, key provisions and how they may impact Sinopec. In September 2016, GS provided a special report on the U.S. elections – providing a detailed look at each presidential candidate, their positions on key issues that may impact Sinopec, political issues and polling summaries. We also described the key congressional races to watch. In November 2016, we provided a post-election analysis covering the results, how such a surprise occurred, and an overview of what policies a Trump administration might prioritize.

3. ADVICE & COUNSEL: Global Strategies advisors, both in Washington, D.C. and in Beijing, have provided frequent ad hoc advice and counsel to Sinopec throughout the contractual period, addressing questions that arise, developments that occur that may affect Sinopec and potential opportunities in the U.S. market. Some examples from this year include advice on various sanctions-related bills in Congress and Texas’ decision not to lift Iran sanctions.

4. WASHINGTON OUTREACH: Global Strategies has introduced Sinopec, on a one to one, face to face basis, to key decision makers in Washington, D.C., focusing on senior elected officials on Capitol Hill whose interests and jurisdictions are important to Sinopec. Given the election campaign period during 2016, Global Strategies concentrated the meetings during the end of the contract period. Through March, Global Strategies arranged 2 meetings, while advising Sinopec on meeting strategy and content, post-meeting notes and follow-up. These meetings were conducted with Rep. Frank Lucas (R-OK) who represents the district where Sinopec has its Oklahoma investments, and Rep. Joe Barton (R-TX) – one of the top energy lawmakers on the Hill. More meetings are currently being scheduled for April.
II. UP COMING POLICY ISSUES SINOCPEC SHOULD BE AWARE OF

POLICY ISSUES TO WATCH FOR

Energy Policy Modernization Act (EPMA) & Other Energy-Related Bills: We reported on the progress of this bill, championed by Senator Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) during the past year. This bipartisan, comprehensive energy bill addresses a broad array of energy-related issues that will impact the U.S. market. Many of the individuals to whom we have introduced Sinopec during the past two years are involved with this bill, either through their work in the Senate Natural Resources Committee (Colin Hayes, Senator Bill Cassidy), lobbying efforts (Jack Gerrard of API) or in crafting the House version of the bill in the House Energy and Commerce Committee (Rep. Mullin, Rep. Green). In December 2016, the House failed to pass a final version of the bill, and it is now expected to go through the legislative process again during this Congress. Many Republicans believe that they will be in a better position to advance their energy agenda when Donald Trump is President and the GOP controls both the House and the Senate thereby reducing the need to compromise with Democrats regarding the content of the energy bill. At the same time, as we learned during our meetings with Reps. Lucas and Barton, health care, and then tax reform, have been the main priorities. It is dubious whether we see comprehensive energy legislation this year, though lawmakers may try to insert energy priorities into other bills, such as an infrastructure bill. This is something GS will track throughout the next contract period.

Greater Scrutiny of State-Owned Enterprises: One trend during the past year has been heightened attention by lawmakers on the actions of foreign (read Chinese) State-Owned Enterprises (SOEs). The election of Donald Trump, who regularly criticizes China and foreign businesses, may embolden those who seek to punish SOEs for what they see as cheating. In September, Senator Chuck Grassley (R-IA) introduced a bill that would strip the immunity of foreign SOEs for the commercial actions of their subsidiaries in the USA (article explaining consequences of bill here, text of bill here) Called the State-Owned Entities Transparency and Accountability Reform (STAR) Act, the bill is still awaiting review by the Senate Committee on the Judiciary.

Iran Nuclear Deal & Sanctions: Donald Trump has been a vocal opponent of the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action, more frequently referred to as the “Iran Nuclear Deal,” as have many Republicans in Congress. Secretary of State, Rex Tillerson stated during his confirmation hearings that he supports a “full review” of the deal, but sounded a more moderate tone emphasizing better monitoring to ensure Iran is in compliance. Trump has also been more quiet about his hostility to the deal recently. While the U.S. alone cannot dismantle the deal, they could unilaterally withdraw or violate the deal by re-imposing previously withdrawn sanctions. Meanwhile, Congress has been putting forward sanctions legislation to punish Iran for missile testing. This has the potential to negatively impact foreign businesses that have dealings and interests in Iran, such as Sinopec, and we will monitor developments both with the Iran Nuclear Deal and with sanctions legislation on the Hill.

Deregulation: The fate of many of the energy regulations passed under President Obama now hang in the balance, and a goal of the Trump administration is to roll back regulations and restrictions on coal, oil and gas development. The Clean Power Plan, currently tied up in court (thanks to a lawsuit previously filed by current EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt), will likely be undone, either in Congress, or the new EPA will simply decline to enforce it. In late March, Trump signed an Executive Order... instructing Pruitt to begin to dismantle the plan. The process of repealing these regulations is complicated and expected to take at least a year. Meanwhile, House Republicans have already taken steps to overturn rules such as those regulating methane emissions from existing oil and gas sources, as well as those regulating water protection and air pollution. During the coming months, there is expected to be much activity at the EPA, Department of Interior, on Capitol Hill and from the White House clawing back regulations in the energy sector.

Trade: Trump’s tone, both on the campaign trail and after election, has often been nationalist and protectionist when it comes to foreign policy and trade issues. He has been highly critical of America’s existing trade deals, “cheating” by countries like China and Japan and employed nationalist rhetoric about keeping jobs in the USA. Unlike in many other areas of policy, he takes an active interest in trade and plans to focus on the issue. He has also nominated some protectionists and advocates for greater trade barriers to serve in his cabinet. Most prominent of these is his choice to head the White House’s National Trade Council – Peter Navarro. Robert Lighthizer, his pick for U.S. Trade Representative, is a long-time China critic and advocates for taking a tougher stance on trade. Another important Department relevant to trade is the Department of Commerce - the Commerce secretary will be charged with implementing policy that affects trade, such as issuing tariffs. While Commerce pick Wilbur Ross has not been known for an anti-China stance, he has recently taken much more aggressive positions in this regard. Between his campaign rhetoric and actions so far when it comes to trade, Trump has shown that he is serious about getting his way on the issue. This administration is thus more likely than previous administrations to take actions in this area that could impact Sinopec’s business in the United States.

GLOBAL STRATEGIES WORK PLAN

The new administration poses both risks and opportunities for Sinopec. Global Strategies’ objectives for 2017 will be to help Sinopec understand the energy policy of this administration and how it affects Sinopec’s business, and help Sinopec enhance existing Congressional as well as establish new relationships with key players in the new administration. Our proposed activities are as follows:

Reporting and Analysis
Global Strategies will continue to provide weekly reports that illustrate the energy policy and political situation in the United States, including developments in the energy market, regulations and legislation that impact Sinopec’s interests such as those described above. Further, Global Strategies will continue to provide situational reports as requested or necessary.

Government Relations
Global Strategies will continue to help Sinopec build relationships in Washington, D.C. with key decision makers, relevant industry insiders, think tanks, and government officials. Global Strategies proposes some or all of the following meetings for the next contract period:

Congress – with significant operations in Oklahoma and the opening of a new office in Texas, it is crucial that Sinopec develop familiar relations with the representatives and/or staff from those states on Capitol Hill, especially those who are involved with energy issues.

In the Senate, the important committees that are involved in energy issues are the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, and the Committee on the Environment and Public Works. Global Strategies proposes meetings with the following individuals:
• Energy and Natural Resources Committee Majority Staff - Lisa Murkowski (R-AK) remains Chairman of the Committee. It is important to continue Sinopec's relationship with the office, by meeting again with Chief of Staff Colin Hayes or other relevant staff. In particular, they can provide updates on next steps for EPMA.

• Jim Inhofe (R-OK) and/or Key Staff on Committee on Environment and Public Works - Inhofe is the senior Senator from Oklahoma and the Chairman of the Committee, so will have interest in Sinopec's investments in Oklahoma, and will be well-versed in energy issues.

• James Lankford (R-OK) and/or Key Staff - Lankford serves on the Appropriations Committee, Subcommittee for Energy and Water Development, which oversees the Department of Energy. The Appropriations Committee writes the legislation that allocates federal funds to the numerous government agencies, departments, and organizations on an annual basis. With both the Oklahoma and energy connections, this is another important person to meet.

• John Cornyn (R-TX) and/or Key Staff - Cornyn serves on the Committee on Finance, and is Chairman of the Subcommittee on International Trade, Customs and Global Competitiveness, and also sits on the Subcommittee on Energy, Natural Resources and Infrastructure. The Committee on Finance has a far-reaching jurisdiction, making it one of the most powerful and influential in the Senate. Specifically, the Finance Committee has jurisdiction over taxation, ports of entry, trade, tariffs, pensions, and infrastructure. The committee has legislative authority over parts of the Departments of Treasury, Commerce, Labor, Homeland Security and Health and Human Service, among others.

On the House side, there is one very important committee that Sinopec should focus on – the Committee on Energy and Commerce. This committee has the broadest jurisdiction of any congressional authorizing committee. Among other things, it has responsibility for environmental quality, energy policy, and interstate and foreign commerce. It oversees multiple cabinet-level Departments and independent agencies, including the Departments of Energy, Health and Human Services, Commerce, and Transportation, as well as the Environmental Protection Agency, the Federal Trade Commission, the Food and Drug Administration, and the Federal Communications Commission. Thusfar in 2017, Sinopec has met with Frank Lucas (R-OK-03) and Joe Barton (R-TX-06). In addition to these, Global Strategies proposes meetings with the following individuals:

• Energy and Commerce Committee Majority Staff – Greg Walden (R-OR) is the new Chairman of this powerful committee, so it would be good to meet with his key staff on the committee.

• Pete Olson (R-TX-22) and/or Relevant Staff – (Houston area) Serves on two Energy and Commerce subcommittees, as Vice Chair of Subcommittee on Energy and Power, and as a member of the Subcommittee on Commerce, Manufacturing and Trade

• Michael Burgess (R-TX-26) and/or Relevant Staff – Texas Representative serving on Energy and Commerce Committee.
• Blake Farenthold (R-TX-27) — represents the Corpus Christi area.

• Bill Flores (R-TX-17) — member of House Energy and Commerce Committee. Subcommittee assignments include Energy and Power, Environment and the Economy, and Oversight and Investigations.

Global Strategies will also endeavor to arrange meetings with others who are relevant to Sinopec's interests, including Rep. Ted Poe (R-TX-02), Rep. John Culberson (R-TX-07), Rep. Al Green (D-TX-09), Rep. Sheila Jackson (D-TX-18) who, though not involved with energy, represent Houston-area districts. Poe serves on the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, and Culberson serves on the House Appropriations Committee as Chair of Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice and Science. This Subcommittee has jurisdiction over the Department of Commerce.

Given the significant role and influence that the Heritage Foundation has had with and as part of the Trump transition team, it is advisable that Sinopec look to continue that relationship as well.

Federal Agencies — as the agencies tasked with implementing new administration rules and policies, building relationships with new officials at these agencies can be beneficial to Sinopec, both in assisting Sinopec in understanding the government's agenda, but also in making it aware of Sinopec's business and potential impact on Sinopec's business. The key agencies that Global Strategies recommends are as follows:

• Environmental Protection Agency — it is important for Sinopec to continue to build the relationship at this agency, as it is charged with regulating and enforcing standards for extraction operations and emissions standards. We will identify the proper person at the EPA for Sinopec to meet with.

• Department of Interior — Bureau of Land Management (BLM) — this agency is tasked with management of public lands, including issuing rules and regulations regarding those lands such as fracking. Meeting with the Director of the BLM (who will need to be nominated, and then confirmed by the Senate) and/or relevant staff, or a more targeted meeting with the staff person in charge of the oil and gas portfolio under the BLM are two options.

• Department of Energy (DOE) — We would help Sinopec continue the relationship already started with the Office of Fossil Energy of the DOE. With a new administration, different individuals will be coming in to fill the leadership roles. Meeting possibilities include the incoming Assistant Secretary for Fossil Energy (who will need to be nominated and confirmed by the Senate) and/or relevant staff and the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Oil and Natural Gas (to be approved by president, but no Senate confirmation required), which has a more narrow focus on administering oil and gas programs, including regulation.

Local Officials — State and local officials should be aware of Sinopec’s positive and important activities and investments in these localities as they are, in effect, Sinopec’s most natural allies. Sinopec's past and possible future investment in the U.S. energy sector is important and positive information that can be helpful not only to Sinopec per se but China itself, as it demonstrates China’s interest and sincerity in investing in the U.S. economy as well as its own. As previously discussed, Global Strategies can initiate meetings with local officials for Sinopec in Texas and Oklahoma. It is important that the political leaders in these states have a friendly, face to face, relationship with Sinopec. Such meetings would be organized in a cost effective manner. Please see below a list of officials with whom we would aim to arrange meetings:

TEXAS

Houston
- Houston Mayor Sylvester Turner (D) and/or relevant staff
- Relevant local office staff of Senator John Cornyn (R)
- Relevant local office of Senator Ted Cruz (R)

Meeting w/U.S. Representatives or their offices in Houston - the location/individual depends on who is available/preferable to meet with. There are nine different representatives from the Houston area, so two or three important ones or relevant staff may be the best.

Austin
- Governor Greg Abbott and/or relevant staff
- Chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, David Porter and/or staff
- Land Commissioner George P. Bush and/or staff

OKLAHOMA

- Governor Mary Fallin and/or relevant staff
- Michael Teague, Oklahoma Secretary of Energy & Environment and Vice Chairman of the Interstate Oil and Gas Compact Commission and/or relevant staff

- Relevant local office staff of Rep. Frank Lucas (located in Yukon, just outside Oklahoma City)
- Relevant local office staff of Senator James Lankford
- Relevant local office staff of Jim Inhofe

- The Office of the Land Commissioner – Director of the Minerals Management Division – Dave Shipman, and/or relevant staff of Land Commissioner Harry Birdwell

RENEWAL OF OUR ENGAGEMENT

we propose an identical engagement for the coming year. Our options and responsibilities can be modified or adjusted to meet the specific and most important needs of Sinopec as you see them.

The fee for our basic services as described above will be US $32,000.00 per month, paid monthly for a 12-month period beginning May 1, 2017. Administrative disbursements, including but not limited to travel outside Washington D.C., will be billed separately. Sinopec may terminate this engagement at any time. In such an event, Sinopec will compensate Global Strategies for its services up to the date of termination as well as for disbursements incurred up to that point in time. Our team members are prepared to come to Beijing as necessary to report on our activities and receive recommendations and comments from Sinopec. All communications regarding our activities will remain confidential except as otherwise required by operation of U.S. law. By signing below, the Parties accept the above outlined terms of our engagement.

As we move forward, we will continue to make ourselves available for advice and counsel on any issue involving policy, government or public relations or crisis management. We greatly appreciate the relationship with SINOPEC DC, and believe your presence here in our nation's capital has had great effect. We look forward to continuing and expanding this relationship in years to come.
