REPORT OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL
TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES
ON THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE
FOREIGN AGENTS REGISTRATION ACT OF 1938, AS AMENDED
FOR THE CALENDAR YEAR 1966

JUNE 1967

TO THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA IN CONGRESS ASSEMBLED:

I have the honor to report on the administration of the Foreign Agents Registration Act of 1938, as amended, pursuant to Section 11 of that Act, which requires the Attorney General from time to time to report to the Congress concerning the administration of the Act, as well as the nature, source and content of political propoganda disseminated or distributed by agents of foreign principals registered under the Act.

It has been the policy of the Department since 1950 to prepare a report each year. This report covers the administration and enforcement of the Foreign Agents Registration Act for the calendar year 1966.

STATISTICAL SUMMARY

Forty-seven new registration statements were filed in 1966, and 74 registrations were terminated, leaving 484 active registrations on file as of December 31, 1966.

During 1966, 132 amending statements were filed to correct deficiencies in registration statements already on file. The Registration Section processed and reviewed 837 supplemental registration statements and processed over 7,035 pieces of correspondence from other government agencies, prospective registrants, and the general public.

Appendix I contains an alphabetical list of all persons whose registration statements under the Act were in active status at any time during 1966. New registrations received during 1966 are marked with an asterisk.

Appendix II lists all registrations according to the geographical area or nationality field of the foreign principal which were in active status during the calendar year 1966, as well as a brief statement identifying the nature of the agency. Registrations terminated during the year are marked with the symbol (T).

When a registration statement is filed by a partnership, corporation, association, organization, or other combination of individuals, each partner, officer, director, or other person rendering assistance to the registrant on behalf of or in the interest of the foreign principal is required to file a short-form registration statement.

Appendix III contains an alphabetical listing of all short-form registrations which were in active status during 1966. There were 383 short-form registrations filed during the year by individuals as officers, directors, employees, or other persons rendering assistance to the registrant in the interests of the foreign principal.

ENFORCEMENT

Compliance with the Act is ordinarily obtained through normal administrative procedures.

A careful review of each statement filed generated many requests from the Department for further disclosure or other corrective action from registrants, and as indicated previously, this resulted in the filing of 132 amended statements. No prosecutive action for willful violations of the Act was required to be undertaken during the year.

Another aspect of the enforcement program was the continued dissemination to the interested departments and agencies of the Federal Government and certain congressional committees of copies of the registration statements and supplements received. The information received in response to this practice concerning possible inadequate disclosure or violation of the Act warrants its continuation.

LEGISLATION

On July 4, 1966, the President signed into law S. 693 amending the Foreign Agents Registration Act, which became effective on October 2, 1966.

One of the major purposes sought to be accomplished by Congress in amending the Act was, as stated in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Report, "to place primary emphasis on protecting the integrity of the decision-making process of our Government and the public's right to know the source of the foreign propaganda to which they are subjected." Thus the focus of the Act as amended is upon the activities of persons who seek to influence not only public opinion but the foreign and domestic policies of the legislative and executive branches of government.

In order to effect its purpose, the Congress amended the previous definition of the term "agent of a foreign principal" so as to narrow its application to persons who not only act in an agency capacity but who must also, in addition, engage in one of four categories of activities, two of which have to do with "political activities," which term was defined in the statute for the first time. At the same time, the scope of the so-called commercial exemption from registration in Section 3 was broadened to include activities that do not serve predominantly a foreign interest, even though they are political. Attorneys were also specifically granted an exemption from registration in certain circumstances. (This curtailment of the scope of the application of the Act may account, at least in part, for the decrease in the number of active registrations on file at the end of the calendar year 1966).

To further a more effective administration and enforcement of the Act, the Attorney General was authorized by Section 2(f) to exempt by regulation certain persons from registration and registrants under the Act from the requirement of furnishing certain information under Section 2(a). In addition to the criminal sanctions already in the Act, an injunctive remedy was also authorized, where compliance with either the Act or the regulations issued under the Act is considered inadequate. Furthermore, it was made unlawful for a registrant to continue to act as an agent of a foreign principal ten days or more after being notified of a deficiency in his registration statement, unless the deficiency is cured within the ten-day period.

The bill amending the Act also struck at certain conflict of interest areas. Political contributions made by an agent of a foreign principal in his capacity as agent, as well as the acceptance of such contributions, has been declared illegal. Further, he must disclose in his registration statement such contributions made in his own behalf.

It also has been made illegal for an officer employed by the United States Government in the executive, legislative, or judicial branches to act as an agent of a foreign principal in such a manner as to require registration under the Act, unless the head of the agency certifies to the Attorney General that such employment is in the national interest.

NATURE, SOURCE AND CONTENT OF POLITICAL PROPAGANDA

The following is an analysis of the principal trends noted during 1966 in the propaganda material disseminated within the United States in the English language on behalf of the foreign principals and geographical areas listed below. Principal publications are set forth together with the approximate circulation figures per issue.

Arab States

I. The League of Arab States, which is composed of Algeria, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco, Saudi Arabia, Sudan, Syria, Tunisia, United Arab Republic, and Yemen, maintains the Arab Information Center (AIC), 757 Third Avenue, New York City, with branches located in Washington, D.C., Chicago, San Francisco, and Dallas. The two principal publications of the AIC are Arab News and Views, a bi-monthly sheet (13,000), and Arab World, a monthly magazine (18,200).

The subject of Palestine was of central concern in Arab League publications in 1966, as in previous years. With regard to Israel's position on the Palestinian refugees, AIC reports declared that the only apparent lesson learned by the Zionists from the Nazis was "to persecute, in their turn, a people weaker than they were." The case was argued that with aid grants to Israel since 1948 totalling over $1 billion from the United States Government alone, plus additional millions from world Jewry and the West German Government, the Jewish state is well able to compensate Arab refugees for the land taken from them. It was said that Israel stands on this matter in direct defiance to world opinion, as expressed in the "repatriation or compensation" resolution reaffirmed by the United Nations every year since 1948.

In almost all Arab publications, a careful distinction is drawn between Arab feelings toward the state of Israel and Zionism and their feelings toward Judaism. It is repeatedly stressed that it is Zionism, "an international, expansionist, political movement," not Judaism, "a religion of universal values," to which the Arab states are opposed. According to Arab sources, at no time in history were Jews in Arab lands subject to persecution; on the contrary, they say, it was in Arab lands that Jews found refuge from European persecution.

United States policy in the Middle East came under fire in connection with its supplying of tanks and aircraft to Israel. Western arms deals with Israel were said to encourage her to commit acts of aggression, in the manner of the November attack on Jordan, which they felt brought her censure from all sides in the United Nations. League spokesmen argued strenuously, moreover, that it is "ridiculous" for the West to try to maintain a balance of power between "a tiny country of two million and an Arab nation of more than 100 million, living in an area bigger than Western Europe."

On major cold war issues, the League States declared themselves to be neutralists, desirous of serving as mediators between the two principal blocs. As a corollary, they reaffirmed their support for self-determination, anti-colonialism, and disarmament; topics on which all neutralist nations were said to agree.

II. Information pertaining to Saudi Arabia was distributed through the public relations firm of Hill & Knowlton, Inc., 150 East 42nd Street, New York City, which publishes a news sheet entitled People, Places, and Products (1,000). The picture of Saudi Arabia given in the brief sketches in this publication is that of "a nation fast shedding its desert and dromedary image." Included are articles on educational progress, health care, agricultural advancements, and urban construction.

III. The Palestine Arab Delegation, 441 Lexington Avenue, New York City, representing the Lebanon-based Arab Higher Committee for Palestine, disseminated a few pamphlets, and intermittent press releases and letters to United Nations and United States officials (circulation varying between 500 and 1,000).

The pronouncements of this group in 1966 were often highly critical of the United States Government. In one press release, for example, the statement was made that "The Palestine Arab Delegation regards the U.S. Government as Enemy No. 1 of the right of self-determination of the people of Palestine. We have, however, great faith in the sense of justice and fairness of the American people. We are certain, if permitted to know the truth, they will force their government to abandon its Zionist-dictated policy on Palestine."

Among the solutions for the Palestine problem proposed by this organization is the transfer of the two million Jews now in Palestine to Europe and America, a move which the group would like to see initiated by the President of the United States. In further statements, the Delegation argued that Palestine is comparable to Rhodesia in its "rule by an alien racist minority," and that the United Nations Security Council should take a similar position on both questions.

With regard to the influence of Israel's supporters in the United States, Delegation pamphlets averred that Palestine was originally promised to the Jews of the world in consideration of Zionist efforts to railroad the United States into World War I as Britain's ally, and that Zionists are now conspiring to railroad the United States into a third World War. In addition, Zionist fund-raising in the United States on a tax-free basis was said to be contributing substantially to United States Treasury deficits.

IV. The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), 801 Second Avenue, New York City, representing the organization of the same name in Jerusalem, Jordan, distributed several pamphlets, an infrequent newsletter, and a few press releases. In this material, members renewed their oath that Palestine would remain their homeland, and expressed continued determination to liberate it from "Zionist usurpation."

In extensive examinations of the philosophy of Zionism, PLO booklets characterized it as "racist" and productive of "a new ghettoization." The essential claim of Zionism was said to be the existence of a chosen race which should not be assimilated by other races and which can fulfill its historic destiny only through the assertion of its unique nationhood. According to the PLO, this belief in a Jewish race is comparable to the myth of a German race and produces similar results: a system of apartheid imposed on the Arabs who remained in Palestine, and a militarized society. With regard to the latter point, the Organization noted that Israel has been censured twelve times by the United Nations for attacks on her neighbors, while no Arab state has ever been condemned in this manner.

Australia

The Australian News & Information Bureau, 636 Fifth Avenue, New York City, distributed the Australian Daily News (576), Australian News Weekly Roundup (1,872), and Australian Monthly Finance and Commerce Notes (125).

The topic of discussion in Australian publications most likely to interest the American reader during the year was Viet Nam. The Australians continued their firm support of United States policies in that area of the world, including the bombing of selected targets in North Viet Nam. As an expression of their active concern in the area, the Australians pointed to an increase of their medical aid to the South and a trebling of their fighting forces.

As to their major activities in other parts of Asia, the Australians reported sending $10 million and 100,000 tons of wheat in emergency aid to India, and joining with eight other nations to form the Asian and Pacific Council (ASPAC) for regional cooperation in economic, political, and other non-military fields.

Bolivia

Press releases and films on behalf of the Government of Bolivia were distributed in 1966 by the Hamilton Wright Organization, Inc., 201 East 42nd Street, New York City.

Of this material, there were very few items which did not accent Bolivia's newly found political stability. The election of General Rene Barrientos to the presidency in July, replacing the ruling military junta, was hailed as bringing "a complete return to democratic rule in the nation."

Bolivia was described as a country fabulously wealthy in diversified minerals such as tin, gold, zinc, and lead, and it was predicted that the new political stability would augur well for the mining industry. Enlightened government policies, including profit-sharing and "incentive wages," were said to be injecting new vitality into the industry, as well as demonstrating the government's concern for the social welfare of the Bolivian people.

Brazil

The firm of Curtis J. Hoxter, Inc., 888 Third Avenue, New York City, issued frequent press releases on Brazil (315).

News from Brazil in 1966 gravitated around one central theme: the Castelo Branco administration's success in pulling Brazil back from the brink of international bankruptcy, combatting inflation, and restoring economic growth (to a rate of approximately 5% in 1965) after two years of near stagnation. The highest priority is now reportedly being given to resumption and expansion of private foreign investment, particularly American, and a variety of measures are being taken to encourage activity in this area. Typical of these is a new foreign investment guaranty treaty, under which United States investors can buy insurance through the Agency for International Development against a variety of investment risks. United States private investment in Brazil, according to these press releases, is now nearing $1 billion, with one-third of total investments coming from reinvested earnings.

Also, a matter of top priority in Brazilian reports is a drive to increase the nation's exports, essential if she is to be able to purchase abroad, notably in the United States, the manufactures necessary to her further development. In this regard, Brazilian officials called for "understanding and a spirit of cooperation on the part of the importing countries--and especially from the U.S."--with a view to removing existing restrictions and difficulties.

In other statements, Brazilian spokesmen reaffirmed "Brazil's solidarity with the American position in the Viet Nam conflict," characterizing her foreign policy in general as one that evolves from "Brazil's basic option in favor of the Western democratic system."

Chile

The Embassy of Chile, Washington, D.C., distributes a fortnightly publication entitled News from Chile.

Accorded the greatest emphasis in this news sheet in 1966 were indications of the Frei Government's progress toward economic stabilization. Indicators most often cited in this respect were the considerable drop in Chile's inflation rate in 1965 and 1966, the successful renegotiation of the foreign debt, a more equitable tax system, a healthy trade surplus contributing to a vastly improved balance of payments situation, and an overhauling of the nation's banking and credit structure.

Considerable attention was also directed, according to Embassy reports, to providing for greater popular participation in the fruits of the Chilean economy. In this connection, it was stated that Chile has fully met the goals of the Alliance for Progress over the past five years and has received the largest per capita volume of United States aid for Alliance purposes in that period. The news sheets further stressed that progress was made despite the efforts of Socialists and Communists, supported by Cuba, to foment labor strife in Chile's copper mines and thus plunge the country into chaos. Castro's ever-increasing abuse of Chile was attributed to an awareness on his part that "the Chilean leadership is attaining by legal and democratic means the economic and social progress that Cuba has been unable to win by police-state methods."

In the realm of foreign affairs, Chile's efforts to promote Latin American economic integration were highlighted. Chile regards such integration as crucial to Latin American survival. In addition, full Chilean support was pledged to any and all efforts to bring peace to Viet Nam.

China (People's Republic of)

Publications emanating from the People's Republic of China were distributed in the United States by the following registered agents: Henry H. Noyes (dba China Books and Periodicals), 2929 24th Street, San Francisco, California; David Rosen (dba China Publications), 95 Fifth Avenue, New York City; and Philip Frankfeld (dba New Era Books, 80 East 11th Street, New York City (terminated August 1966)). Among the major publications distributed were Peking Review, a weekly news magazine (1,500); China Pictorial (757); China Reconstructs (685); Chinese Literature (140); Chinese Sports (75); and Evergreen, a bi-monthly youth magazine (95). Also, in Chinese, the daily newspaper Renmin Ribao (35) and the magazines Renmin Huabao (306); Hongqi (57), and Minzu Huabao (112). In addition, a great number of small books and pamphlets were distributed, usually mailed to libraries and educational institutions. Most popular of these in the latter part of 1966 was the pocket-size book Quotations from Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

The year 1966 is the first year of China's Third Five-Year Plan, and many publications focused on aspects of the new plan. The ultimate goal is "to build China into a strong socialist country with modern agriculture, industry, national defense, science and technology within 20 to 30 years," and advances already made in these areas were described as "tremendous," "remarkable," and similar superlatives. In the new plan, according to these publications, agriculture is to receive top priority, although ideological and political work remains at the forefront of all activity.

Also on the domestic scene, Chinese periodicals hailed the "great proletarian cultural revolution" which swept over the country in the latter part of 1966. All segments of Chinese society were reported to be studying the works of Chairman Mao diligently and holding massive "spontaneous" rallies to hail a new era of "establishing the complete ascendancy of Mao Tse-tung's thought." Led by the Red Guard, the Chinese people were said to be engaged in a tremendous struggle to eliminate capitalism and bourgeois reactionism from their society, once and for all.

Chinese spokesmen also commented on events in the rest of Asia. Viet Nam was a favorite topic. They accused the United States of "atrocities" and "escalation plots," which were fully detailed. In India, too, American malevolence was said to be the key point at issue to the Chinese, and according to this Red Chinese material, India's food shortage is caused by a feudal system of land ownership and "U.S. dumping of surplus food." The Communists represented the entire Indian economy as helplessly dependent on American aid.

Signs of rough sailing for the Chinese, both in Asia and in other parts of the world, were indicated in numerous reports. Thus, 1966 saw Chinese protests to the Indonesian Government against its dissolution of the Communist Party and continued maltreatment of Chinese nationals, protests against Ghanaian charges that China is supplying arms to Nkrumah in Guinea to help him stage a counter-revolution, and protests against Fidel Castro's charges that China is attempting to interfere in Cuban internal affairs and impose her will on the Latin American nation.

The most scorching of all Chinese commentary, however, was reserved for the so-called "Holy Alliance" supposedly existing between the United States and the USSR. These two great powers were said to be in ever-increasing collaboration to sell out the revolutionary interests of the peoples of all countries and to attain world domination. The United Nations was denounced as the site of such nefarious deals, and the developing nations were urged instead to rally around the glorious example of the revolutionary Chinese people.

China (Republic of, Taiwan)

Material concerning the Republic of China is distributed in the United States by the Chinese Information Service with offices at 1270 Avenue of the Americas, New York City, and at 141 Battery Street, San Francisco, California. The principal publications were Free China Weekly, a newspaper (4,780); Free China Review, a monthly magazine (400); News from China, a daily sheet (194); Background on China (224), and Features from China (102), intermittent feature sheets. In addition, the Information Service is engaged in the production and distribution of brief documentary films for television, usually distributed to about 85 stations.

An ever constant theme in the Republic of China's publications is an expressed determination to recapture the mainland and free it from the Communists. United States arms and moral support were continually sought after for such a venture in 1966, particularly after the outbreak of the "great cultural revolution" on the mainland. This upheaval was considered by the Republic to have shaken the foundation of the Peiping regime, making it vulnerable for Nationalist attack at any time.

On the question of admission of Red China to the United Nations, the Republic continued its "no compromise" stand. Specifically, the Nationalist Government declared that it would rather lose its seat in the United Nations altogether than participate in a "two Chinas" solution. Moreover, it declared that a seal of international approval given to the Red regime would deprive the Chinese people of all hope of regaining their freedom, and would greatly undermine the United Nations itself. Strong opposition was also expressed to the possibility of United States recognition of Outer Mongolia, which the Nationalist Government regards as "an integral part of Chinese territory," currently reduced to "a puppet regime of Soviet Russia."

In another area of the world, the Nationalists reported acceleration of what they felt to be a highly successful program of sending farm demonstration teams to various nations in Africa. Dahomey was recorded as the first African state to switch recognition from Peiping to Taipei, thus turning the African balance in favor of the Republic--sixteen nations there now have diplomatic relations with Taipei, fifteen, with Peiping, and six are neutral. The anti-Chinese Communist trend which the Nationalists saw in Africa in 1966 was predicted to continue in the future; moreover, the only area in the world where Red China's influence was thought not to have declined in 1966 was Cambodia, whose ruler, Sihanouk, was characterized as "even more obedient to Peking than Ho Chi Minh."

At home, the Republic reported an economic growth rate of 9% and one of the highest standards of living in the Far East. Moreover, in contrast to the recent past when the country was almost an exclusively agricultural exporter, the Nationalists now boast of a rise in the export of industrial goods to 40% of total exports.

Colombia

A new registrant in June 1966 was the Colombia Information Service located in the newly-opened Colombian Center of the Republic of Colombia, 140 East 57th Street, New York City. Information on Colombia previous to June was distributed in the United States by Samuel Stavisky & Associates, Inc., 1730 M Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. Both registrants disseminated the monthly newsletter Colombia Today (12,000) and intermittent press releases.

The primary purpose of the center, according to its director, is to stimulate United States public interest in and understanding of Colombia's economic and social development and of its cultural achievements. Publications during 1966 were primarily directed at the encouragement of investments, trade and tourism, and increased consumption of Colombian coffee. According to these publications, the Government which succeeded the regime that was deposed in 1957 restored both economic and political stability, as well as democratic government, to Colombia. This process was said to have culminated in the free and peaceful election of Dr. Carlos Lleras Restrepo, a lawyer and economist, to a 4-year term as President in May of 1966. The Lleras government was declared to be dedicated to fostering competitive private enterprise with a minimum of State intervention. International capital investing in Colombia was promised both security and high returns.

Cuba

Publications emanating from Cuba are distributed in the United States by Robert Brauer, 761 Ninth Avenue North, St. Petersburg, Florida, a registered agent of the Ministry of Foreign Relations of Cuba. Material disseminated in 1966 included Granma, a weekly newspaper with Spanish and English editions (18 each); Bohemia (Spanish), a weekly magazine (15); and Cuba (Spanish), a monthly magazine (16).

Considerable attention was given in Cuban publications to the domestic achievements of the Castro Government. According to these sources, Cuba, under Castro, was the first government in Latin America to be free of illiteracy, reducing the proportion of her uneducated from 23% to 3.9% in only one year (1961). In addition, Cuba was reported to have the largest appropriation of all Latin American countries in her national budget for increasing educational facilities. A favorite Cuban boast in this regard was that all education, including that at the university level, is free.

The emphasis of EFTA publications for 1966 was much the same as that in 1965; i.e., the progress being made toward reduction of internal tariffs (with complete free trade in manufactured goods between member states projected for the beginning of 1967) and, concurrently, overtures being made to the EEC for formation of a single common market for all Western Europe. France is viewed as the key stumbling-block to closer EEC-EFTA relations, since, according to the EFTA Reporter (March 1966), "there has never been any doubt of the desire of the Five to accommodate Britain and her EFTA partners in an enlarged Community."

Great significance was also attached to a successful conclusion of the Kennedy Round of international trade negotiations. Failure to achieve significant world-wide tariff reductions, EFTA spokesmen declared, would be an invitation to a return to divisive trade practices, protectionism, and economic nationalism.

Ghana

The Ghana Information Services, 565 Fifth Avenue, New York City, disseminated Ghana Today, a bi-weekly news magazine (530); Ghana Reconstructs, an occasional magazine (210); and a variety of pamphlets and press releases (500).

A bloodless overthrow of the Nkrumah regime by Major-General Ankrah in February 1966 occupied a central place in all Ghanaian publications throughout the year. Nkrumah's rule was averred to have been a one-man dictatorship, reportedly bringing Ghana to the brink of bankruptcy by mismanagement, waste, corruption, and fraud, all of which the new National Liberation Council hopes to remedy.

Among the major policies announced by the new government were the following: the military council has no intention of ruling indefinitely and will prepare a constitution for popular referendum; active State participation in the economy of the country will be limited to certain basic and key projects and some of the corporations in the state sector at the time of the overthrow will be turned back to the private; the private sector will remain the largest sector both in terms of number of persons engaged and gross output.

With regard to the foreign debt and foreign investment, the new government announced that arrangements were being made through the International Monetary Fund to renegotiate with foreign creditors a debt of over $1 billion left by the Nkrumah regime. Investment of foreign capital, particularly of United States private capital, is very much desired. In support of such investment, the Ghanaians argue that their country has excellent national resources, and despite the recent economic mismanagement, the highest standard of living of any African population.

In the general realm of foreign policy, the new leaders announced that Ghana's position will be one of strict non-alignment and friendship with all, except that no interference in her internal affairs will be tolerated from any nation. The Nkrumah regime's policy of harboring and training political refugees, with the aid of Communist "experts," to subvert neighboring African states was exposed and thoroughly denounced, and strict non-interference in the affairs of other states is promised for the future.

Great Britain

The British Information Service (BIS), 845 Third Avenue, New York City, distributes a great variety of material relating to Great Britain. Its regular publications are Today's British Papers (503) and British Weeklies (398), composed of reprints of articles on current affairs by British newspapers; British Record (7,704), bi-monthly political and economic notes, and numerous information sheets and pamphlets with varying circulation.

Statements of British policy on major world issues formed an important part of Information Service publications during the year. With regard to Viet Nam, the British generally expressed support and praise for United States policy, but disassociated themselves from the American decision in June to bomb strategic industrial installations in Hanoi and Haiphong. They placed the blame for continuation of the fighting in Viet Nam, however, squarely on Hanoi for refusing to consider all offers of negotiation. Great Britain, according to these publications, provides medical aid to South Viet Nam, but feels her position as co-chairman of the Geneva Conference prohibits her making any military contribution in the area.

Concerning another Asian country, China, the official British position for fifteen years has been that "the new-found unity and strength of China" should be recognized by the turning over to the Peking Government of the Chinese seat in the United Nations. Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart was quoted in this regard as declaring that "The present leaders of China have the most frightening misconceptions about the rest of the world and only time and contact with that world will serve to correct those misconceptions."

With reference to a problem closer to home--Rhodesia--the British stated that their principal aim is "to restore constitutional rule" to that country so as to insure full equality of opportunity, the safeguarding of the rights of both Africans and Europeans, and eventual majority rule. Further economic sanctions against the Ian Smith Government were predicted, but the use of force was ruled out both as impractical and as likely to bring the most harm to the African population.

Preservation of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) was another British concern in 1966. Government spokesmen frequently expressed the belief that the organization is as necessary now as when it was first formed; moreover, they felt it essential that there exist an integrated military organization rather than merely an exchange of promises of aid between governments. In addition, going beyond the military role of the alliance, the British expressed the view that NATO should be the point from which approaches are made for fuller East-West understanding. With regard to Germany's role in NATO, Prime Minister Wilson was quoted in an April address to Parliament as saying: "We are opposed to any German finger on the nuclear trigger which is not there already. We have never been opposed to consultation within NATO, but we are opposed to giving anyone else who has not got it today the basis for starting a nuclear explosion."

The major domestic issue for Great Britain during the year was its economic crisis. The severe balance of payments situation was reportedly being met by measures to increase exports and drastically reduce inflationary spending at home. A freeze on wages, salaries, and dividends was announced for six months, to be followed by a further six months of severe restraint. Withdrawal from Aden and a massive reduction of troops in Malaysia were also expected to greatly reduce expenditures.

India

The Information Service of the Embassy of India, 2107 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C., disseminates three regular publications: Indiagram, a daily news sheet, India News, a weekly paper, and Foreign Affairs Record, a monthly magazine, as well as occasional background news sheets and pamphlets.

A portrayal of India as the champion of democracy in Asia was woven through almost all its Embassy material distributed here. According to these publications, the strength of Indian democracy was demonstrated most clearly in the smooth transition of power to Mrs. Indira Gandhi after the death of Premier Shastri at the beginning of the year. Mrs. Gandhi herself was said to exemplify India's accent on youth and secularism.

The announced foreign policy of the new government centered on a reaffirmation of the basic tenets of nonalignment and peaceful coexistence. Reiterated also was India's strong desire to promote an international agreement on nonproliferation of nuclear weapons and her own determination to use nuclear energy for peaceful purposes only, despite continued bomb-testing by Red China. On the question of foreign aid, Mrs. Gandhi expressed the government's position as that of "seeking more aid . . . . We need a little extra assistance during the next few years sooner to attain a state of self-reliant growth."

The year 1966 saw severe setbacks to the Indian economy, which the Gandhi government attributed primarily to drastic food shortages. The Indians expressed deep gratitude to the United States for the large-scale American food shipments sent to relieve the shortages, and voiced the hope that they would be able to achieve self-sufficiency in food production by 1970 or 1971 through increased use of scientific methods of farming and incentive prices for producers. A strong effort to put the economy on a sounder footing was reported through a devaluation of the rupee by 36.5%. Dual objectives of this action are to increase India's exports and to secure fuller use of existing industrial capacities. According to the Embassy publications, "the pace of progress has not been as fast as desired, but India is wedded to the democratic path."

Although no major hostilities occurred during the year, India's relations with her nearest neighbors--Pakistan and China--remained unhappy. The Indians contended that Pakistan was making warlike preparations in Kashmir and resuming anti-Indian propaganda, thus departing from the letter and spirit of the Tashkent agreement of January 1966, in which both countries renounced the use of force in settling differences. India reportedly made repeated overtures to Pakistan for resumption and expansion of trade and economic cooperation between the two nations, but all were said to be stymied by Pakistan's refusal even to hold talks without prior conditions concerning Kashmir. The Indian position on the State of Jammu and Kashmir is that it is "legally, morally, and on the basis of the will of the people, an integral part of the Indian Union and a vital part of India's defenses against China." Prime Minister Gandhi declared at a reception in New York that "any plebiscite today would by definition amount to questioning the integrity of India. It would raise the issue of secession--an issue on which the United States fought a civil war . . . . We cannot and will not tolerate a second partition of India on religious grounds. It would destroy the very basis of the Indian State." The United States was strongly urged not to resume military aid to Pakistan.

On the topic of the Peoples Republic of China, although that country was said to maintain its menacing position, India rejected any idea of joining a military alliance against her, stating that defense pacts do not help to lessen but only create tension. Instead, the Indians maintain that they are "the only country which can stand up against China, both in terms of population, political institutions, economic potentiality, and development," and that, therefore, they thwart Chinese designs merely by the example of their successful effort to build democracy.

Relations with another Communist neighbor, the Soviet Union, were reportedly far more profitable for India in 1966. A new five-year trade agreement signed by the two countries is expected to double their 1965 trade by 1970 and provide opportunities for setting up industries in either country to meet the requirements of the other country.

Indonesia

The Embassy of Indonesia, 2020 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C., distributes a weekly news release.

Still in the process of recovery from the abortive Communist coup of September 30, 1965, which greatly reduced the power of President Sukarno, Indonesia concentrated her efforts in 1966 on repairing both her economy and her relations with her Asian neighbors. Embassy publications reported that top priority was being given to measures to reduce inflation and to increase the nation's rice supply. Rescheduling of foreign debt payments and acquiring new credits were also announced as major economic efforts.

The foreign policy of the new government led by General Suharto was described as one of nonalignment and aid from all countries, without political strings, was welcomed. In efforts to improve regional cooperation, the nation exchanged official visits with various other Southeast Asian Governments, the highlight of such contacts coming in August with normalization of relations between Malaysia and Indonesia. This latter event was frequently referred to by the Indonesians as significant support for their view on the Viet Nam conflict that "Asian problems should be solved by Asians themselves."

Another major event for Indonesia was her rejoining the United Nations in September 1966, after being absent since March 1965. At this time the Indonesians reiterated their rejection of all military alliances with either East or West. On this subject, General Nasution was quoted as saying that the most important thing for Southeast Asia is further cooperation in the social and economic fields, and that international Communism can only be held back by raising the standard of living and education of the people, and by defending the deeply religious nature of Southeast Asians, to which Communism is alien. These sources also reported that the Communist Party was banned in Indonesia as a result of the attempted coup. Embassy publications quoted Nasution as accusing the West of pursuing its own selfish ends in wanting to raise the Asian standard of living so as to create new markets for Western industrial production. The General stressed that Asia needs heavy as well as light industries.

Israel

Three registrants distributed information concerning Israel in 1966. The Jewish Agency-American Section, 515 Park Avenue, New York City, distributed the Israel Digest, a bi-weekly news pamphlet (8,000), press releases (125), and other material. The Israel Information Service, 11 East 70th Street, New York City, distributed News from Israel (9,000), a bi-weekly newsletter; Land of the Bible, a bi-monthly pamphlet (15,000), Israel, a quarterly magazine, press releases (60), and other publications. In addition, the Information Service distributes approximately fifty films and four regular radio broadcasts, Vistas of Israel, Israel Press Review, Talk from Jerusalem, and Israel Almanac.

Ruder and Finn, Inc., 130 East 59th Street, New York City, distributed infrequent press releases on behalf of the Government of Israel Investment Authority, New York.

Israel's relations with her Arab neighbors occupied a central place in the material disseminated. In a statement of basic foreign policy aims at the beginning of the year, Prime Minister Eshkol described Israel's principal objective in the Middle East as "the advancement of peace and the striving for relations founded on respect for the independence and territorial integrity of all the States in the region." (Israel Digest). Mr. Eshkol went on further to say, however, that in view of the Arabs' continued preparation for war, instigated largely by Nasser of Egypt, the Government of Israel would continue to act to bolster Israel's military strength.

Several publications gave details of terrorist attacks on Israel from across the Jordanian and Syrian borders. The governments of these countries were termed fully responsible for not having taken adequate steps to prevent the incursions and, in the case of Syria, for giving them unreserved public backing. Syria was described as the "source, training ground, principal supplier, and main support" of the terrorist organization El-Fatah, said to have been formed expressly to carry out sabotage in Israeli territory. Israel's own raid on Jordan in November 1966 was said to have been mounted in reprisal for innumerable acts of sabotage and undertaken only after exhausting all possible diplomatic means of ending the attacks. In this regard, Israel declared that it was the United Nations' weakness and failure to exert a restraining influence on the Arab countries which compelled her to take military actions for her own self-defense. She rejected United Nations censure of her attack as biased and unjust.

On the related question of the Palestinian refugees, the Israeli Government took the position that they should be resettled and integrated into Arab states and that they are not being so integrated solely because the Arab Governments prefer to capitalize on their plight for propaganda purposes. In addition, it characterized a refugee group, the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) as an army with the ultimate intention of destroying Israel, and as one that receives arms and training from Communist China. PLO members, according to the Israelis, are also being sent to fight alongside the Viet Cong against the United States and South Vietnamese Governments.

Domestically, the Israelis reported that they consider immigration from the Western countries as vital to their further development. New settlers from the industrial countries were said to be vitally needed for their technical skills and capital, cultural resources, and democratic tradition, and assurances were made that all amenities that could be made available in housing, mortgages, loans, licenses, etc., would be offered.

While citing the need for additional skills for her own development, Israel stressed that she is herself engaged in numerous aid projects to less developed areas of the world, and particularly to Africa. Israeli spokesmen noted that Egypt's efforts to stop African countries from setting up regular relations with Israel have failed, since "there is a common denominator of past suffering and discrimination between Israel on the one hand and Africa, Asia, and Latin America on the other."

Japan

Several registrants disseminated material on behalf of Japan. The Japan Trade Center, an agent of the Japanese Government External Trade Organization (JETRO), maintains offices in New York, New Orleans, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Chicago. Its New York office distributes press releases, pamphlets, and advertising material through Ruder and Finn, Inc., 130 East 59th Street, New York City, and Gotham Vladimir Advertising, Inc., 342 Madison Avenue, New York City. Its San Francisco office transmits press releases through Charles von Loewenfeldt, Inc., 860 California Street, San Francisco 8, California. In addition, International Public Relations Co., Ltd., dba Japan Steel Information Center, 230 Park Avenue, New York City, and 1000 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C., distributed a number of pamphlets with varying circulation as an agent of the Kozai Club, Tokyo. Other registrants include the Japan Trade Promotion Office, 111 Broadway, Suite 515, New York City, an agent of the Embassy of Japan, and the United States-Japan Trade Council, 1000 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C., an organization made up of American and Japanese business organizations with offices in the United States, which distributes intermittent press releases, a newsletter, and pamphlets on various matters affecting the interests of the Council.

As indicated by the foregoing listing of registrants, publications about Japan written for distribution in this country are principally trade-oriented. Particularly stressed in almost all publications is the fact that Japan is now the second largest market in the world for overall United States exports, and the very first market when farm products alone are considered. Moreover, the age of "mass consumer spending" has arrived in Japan, and the emergence of such a mass market is expected by Japanese business leaders to give even greater impetus to the import of American consumer goods. Over the past decade, the export-import balance between the two countries has reportedly favored the United States by $2 billion.

A number of registrants expressed great concern at the proposed Herlong-Hartke Bill to amend the Anti-Dumping Act of 1921. According to these sources, the amendments under consideration would turn the Act into major protectionist legislation, thus reversing official American policy of creating a freer trade flow and inviting retaliation abroad against United States exporters. In this regard, the point was repeatedly made that American purchases from Japan facilitate Japanese spending here. In addition, in the case of steel, it was argued that continued imports of the Japanese product benefit the entire American economy by creating a healthy competition which curbs excessive price rises and thus stems inflation.

Going beyond the issue of bilateral trade, the material of some of the registrants urged the United States to a greater "Pacific-mindedness." Specifically, Japanese Government spokesmen urged the United States to join with Japan in a special relationship to provide the economic aid, trade, and education so badly needed by the Pacific countries. These spokesmen reported that, even now, Japan's foreign aid program in Southeast Asia is second only to that of the United States, and she is anxious to do more. Japan feels that, as the major democracy and the most industrialized nation in Asia, she is in a position to play a key liaison role between the underdeveloped East and the developed West.

With regard to Viet Nam, the key issue in Asia at the present, Government spokesmen stressed that, although the Japanese people's abhorrence of war and the provisions of her Constitution prohibiting the use of force in settling international disputes prevent her from giving military aid to South Viet Nam, American actions there have Japan's full understanding and support.

Korea

The Embassy of Korea, 1828 Jefferson Place, N.W., Washington, D.C., distributes Korean Report, a tri-monthly magazine.

Among the major news items in Korean Report during the year was the story of the doubling of the South Korean contingent of fighting men in South Viet Nam to almost 45,000 men. The belief was frequently expressed in the Embassy publication that Communist aggression against Viet Nam represents a "direct and grave menace against the security and peace of Free Asia," and in this regard, the strongest support and praise was given to the United States as the "champion in the global struggle for peace and freedom."

Another expression of her concern for Southeast Asian affairs was Korea's leadership in forming the new nine-nation Asian and Pacific Council (ASPAC). This organization met for the first time in Seoul in June and elected Korean foreign minister Tong-won Lee as its chairman. Its purpose was said to further cooperation in economic and other non-military fields.

Concerning Korea's internal development, Korean Report indicated that the nation's growth rate for 1965 reached 8%. The chief gains were made in the expansion of exports, principally industrial manufactures. 1965 figures reportedly quintupled 1960. The year 1966, like 1965, was designated a "Year of Hard Work," with the ultimate aim being a fully modernized Korean society of mass production and consumption by the latter part of the 1970's.

Mexico

Washburn, Stringer Associates, Inc., 701 Washington Building, Washington, D.C., issues two regular economic newsletters, Financial Notes from Mexico (157), and Mexico-Highlights intermittently on behalf of the Mexican Public Relations Council, Mexico City.

Both Washburn, Stringer publications focused exclusively on the Mexican economy. One newsletter briefly encapsulated this economy in the following manner: "A heavy inflow of foreign capital, a stable currency, and a healthy growth rate of 6%." Clearest indication of a stable currency, the publications noted, is the fact that the Mexican Peso has been used as a basis of payments in international loans.

Numerous bids were made in the Mexican publications for increased foreign investment, providing it did not displace local investment. The success of earlier attempts to diversify the sources of foreign funds was shown by the fact that, whereas in 1955, 99% of foreign investment came from the United States and international agencies, by 1964 this was reduced to 56%, with new aid coming particularly from Western Europe. United States investment in Mexico, however, was still expected to pass the $200 million level in 1966.

In matters of trade, Mexico reportedly remained closely tied to the United States. According to the newsletters, approximately two-thirds of both her export and import trade are with this country, and this trade is heavily in the United States' favor. The United States reportedly sells well over a billion dollars to Mexico every year and ranks her among our top six foreign markets.

An additional point of interest about the Mexican economy, and one that was often emphasized in their material, is that Mexico is a free enterprise economy, with 90% of the income producing wealth in private hands. While there is some government monopoly, the Mexicans claim that there is more state control in France, Italy, Germany, and England than in Mexico.

Pakistan

The Embassy of Pakistan distributes Pakistan Affairs, a bi-weekly news sheet, Interim Report Series, a report sheet on economic developments, and occasional pamphlets.

The Kashmir dispute with India figured prominently in many Pakistani reports. According to Pakistani material, the entire argument revolves around India's refusal to keep her pledge made before the United Nations in 1948 and 1949 to allow a free and impartial plebiscite in Kashmir, under United Nations auspices, to determine whether the State should join India or Pakistan. Embassy reports indicated that until the people of Kashmir are given this right of self-determination there can be no true peace or friendship between India and Pakistan. They further emphasized that over the years fourteen proposals by the United Nations have been accepted by Pakistan but rejected by India, and that if the world continues to allow Indian occupation to remain unchallenged, it will imply that a party in default merely has to use stalling tactics long enough to nullify agreed contracts. Disputing India's "pacifism," the Pakistanis further declared that India has shown the world that she is not averse to the use of force to settle disputes with her neighbors and continues to build an offensive military capability many times the strength needed for purely defensive purposes. The Pakistanis also charge that India has the capability of producing a nuclear bomb, has equivocated on whether or not it is developing one, and has resisted nuclear controls and inspection by the International Atomic Energy Commission.

Pakistan's relations with two major powers, the United States and China, were discussed in several reports. "Normalization" of relations with America was welcomed, and the United States was urged to use its "great and indisputable influence in the sub-continent" to help resolve the Kashmir dispute. With regard to China, Embassy reports stressed that Pakistan has done nothing in normalizing its relations with that country at the expense of its alliance and friendship with the United States. They declare that Pakistan's relations with China are "no more and no less than the normal and correct behavior of one country toward another country living under conditions governed by similar geopolitical considerations." India charges of a "secret agreement" between Pakistan and China against India and of "Sino-Pakistani nuclear collaboration" were declared utterly baseless.

Numerous reports evidenced Pakistan's great pride in the progress of her economy. Such articles accentuated "Pakistan's dedication to economic liberalism." Her rate of industrial growth was attributed primarily to private initiative. In contrast to the tendency among most developing nations to attempt to generate growth through doctrinaire philosophies of state control, Pakistan feels that it has developed a highly successful pragmatic mix of government planning and private enterprise, with emphasis on the latter. Foreign private investment is very much desired, and the claim is made in Embassy publications that Pakistan is second to no country in granting concessions and facilities to foreign investors, including tax holidays ranging up to six years. As a further inducement to investors, Pakistan points with pride to an overall growth rate of 5.5%, which it is claimed is rapidly approaching twice the rate of population growth.

Portugal

Two registrants represented Portuguese interests during the year: Casa de Portugal, 570 Fifth Avenue, New York City, which distributed a daily information bulletin in Portuguese (51) to United States newspapers and radio stations, and a less frequent bulletin in English, in collaboration with the Portuguese news agency of Lisbon; and Downs and Roosevelt, Inc., 1629 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C., which represents the Overseas Companies of Portugal (OCP), an organization of companies having business interests in Portugal and Portuguese overseas territories. OCP publications consisted of booklets describing living conditions and economic opportunities in Portuguese Africa, plus reprints of relevant articles in United States newspapers.

"The defense of Portugal's overseas provinces is the fundamental task of all Portuguese and is the maximum preoccupation of the highest organs of the State." In statements like the preceding, Portuguese Government spokesmen repeatedly emphasized throughout the year the great importance Portugal attaches to her territories in Africa. According to these spokesmen, Portugal regards her African possessions not as colonies but as integral parts of the home state. Their people reportedly share full political and civil rights without distinction of race, religion, or culture, and enjoy the same rights and freedoms as citizens living in Portugal. Universal adult suffrage is based on being literate (three years basic education), a taxpayer, or the head of a family. The Portuguese, who date their arrival in Africa back 450 years, feel their territories to be a model for the rest of the continent. According to Premier Salazar, "Either the African countries will organize themselves on the basis of multi-racialism [on the Portuguese model], or they must be considered lost to civilization."

Portuguese efforts to develop Angola and Mozambique were outlined in several publications. In this regard, numerous statistics were provided on Portuguese programs and expenditures in the fields of education, medical services, agriculture, roads, power development, etc. Because of these benign policies, the Portuguese Government claimed to be supported by the great majority of the African population. Rebels in the Congolese border area of Angola were termed mere adventurers, requiring a policing operation but no major military activity to keep them in check. Concerning the broader danger of Communist penetration of the continent, the Portuguese felt themselves to be providing an invaluable check on such a spread, comparable to the effect of the American presence in Viet Nam.

Turning to economic matters, OCP publications filed during the year were especially concerned with emphasizing recent Portuguese measures to lessen restrictions on foreign investment, both in Portugal itself and in the provinces. According to these publications, outside investment is now very much desired and has been considerably spurred by 1965 laws allowing a company's entire capital to be held by foreigners.

Rhodesia

The Ian Smith Government of Rhodesia maintains an information office at 2852 McGill Terrace, N.W., Washington, D.C. Its publications consist of Rhodesian Commentary, a twice-monthly newsletter (10,500); Rhodesian Viewpoint, a fairly frequent two-page sheet of general commentary (varying circulation); Press Comment on Rhodesia, two pages of reprints from the United States press concerning Rhodesia; and a number of pamphlets. The Information Office is also engaged in film distribution.

All Rhodesian material distributed by the Information Office essentially consisted of arguments in support of the Ian Smith Government's unilateral declaration of independence from Great Britain in November 1965. The principal points made in these arguments may be summarized as follows: First of all, their country has actually exercised the right of self-government since 1923, during which time it has provided for the welfare of its people with virtually no assistance in the form of grants from external sources. They assert that it is Rhodesians who have built Rhodesia, and it is they who have earned the right to determine their destiny.

On the question of black African advancement, Government spokesmen contend that programs in this area are being accelerated rather than retarded by independence. The largest single item in the Rhodesian budget is African education, and the Rhodesians claim to have achieved more in this field than any country in Africa to the north. Rhodesian health services likewise are termed second only to those of South Africa. Moreover, the Smith Government argues that there is no discrimination on the grounds of race in Rhodesian political or social life. According to these sources, the vote is open to any Rhodesian, regardless of race, who can conform to certain minimal standards. Reportedly, tens of thousands of Africans have already met these standards, and as education progresses the number becoming eligible rapidly increases. It is the position of the present government that unqualified and immediate "majority rule" in Rhodesia could only lead to the eclipse of democracy and the path of "one election, one party, one dictator," which has been followed in much of the rest of Africa. However, they also stress that eventual African rule is inherent in the present Constitution.

On the world scene, the Rhodesians feel that they are in the forefront of the battle for freedom from Communism. In this regard, the Smith Government has offered both troops and supplies to the American effort in Viet Nam, but reports that their offer has never been acknowledged. As to its own territory, the Government states it has proved that terrorists entering from Zambia are armed with Russian and Chinese weapons; however, terrorist activity is alleged to have been reduced to a near farce because of the willing cooperation of local Africans with the Rhodesian security forces.

Of all the matters of concern to the Smith Government during the year, the event that appeared to evoke the greatest distress was the action of the United Nations in declaring Rhodesia a threat to the peace. The Rhodesians maintain that it takes "tortuous reasoning" to discern a threat to the peace from a country which has not fired a shot against anyone and in which peace and order prevail. In this connection, the Information Service publications note that from January to April alone the United States taxpayer contributed over $4 million--a sum comparable to United States support for all United Nations peacekeeping operations--to aid Zambia, a nation which is calling for the use of force against the peaceful Rhodesian Government. They further assert that millions of dollars have also been lost to the United States in the enacting of trade sanctions against Rhodesia, and many more will be lost if the United States is obliged to rescue Britain financially from the effects of a trade war with South Africa, which may develop out of the sanctions dispute.

South Africa

The Information Service of South Africa, 655 Madison Avenue, New York City, distributes several publications dealing with that country. Included are News from South Africa, a weekly bulletin of financial and general news items (8,300), South African Scope, a monthly news magazine (15,000), South African Panorama, a monthly pictorial magazine (3,000), and a number of pamphlets, distributed intermittently.

South African publications in 1966, as in previous years, devoted a major portion of their articles to justification of their social system of "apartheid," or separate development for blacks and whites. The ultimate goal of apartheid was described as "a number of self-governing Bantu nations, alongside, and in cooperative association with the white nation--a South African commonwealth or community of nations, based on political independence and economic interdependence." Multi-racialism in the Republic was termed infeasible. It is the view of the South Africans that there is no true multi-racialism anywhere in Africa, nor is there ever likely to be. The various Bantu "nationalisms" and the European are not readily blended, they declare, and nowhere in Africa have the African and the European personality been accommodated in one political system without one predominating to the exclusion of the other. Apartheid, on the other hand, is said to aim at "preserving" the distinctive characteristics of all South African nationalities.

The majority of the booklets distributed by the Information Service portrayed what the Government feels to be the advantages of the apartheid system to the black African. Described in some detail were Government programs in education, health, housing, social and cultural welfare, etc., in all of which areas the Republic's care for its people was said to be far superior to that given in native-ruled Africa. A particularly attractive picture was presented of the Transkei, first of the self-governing Bantu "homelands" to be set up. According to the booklets, over one million foreign Africans work in South Africa, and one of the country's greatest problems is presented by the thousands of others who attempt illegal entry in order to seek the benefits of the South African way of life.

Concerning another area under the Republic's control, South West Africa, the government maintained that it was the victim of a vicious campaign in the United Nations led by black Africa, a campaign based on "political and particularly emotional grounds, rather than upon objective grounds concerned with the well-being of the peoples of South Africa." This campaign reportedly was what brought about the General Assembly's decision in October to deprive the Republic of her League of Nations mandate over South West Africa despite the earlier rejection by the World Court of charges of South African militarization and oppression of the natives in the area. The Republic termed the United Nations decision "illegal and unconstitutional" and promised "firm and determined resistance" to any system it might attempt to impose on the area. A particular warning was given to the United States, which was told by the South African Government that present United Nations actions which the United States supports are escalating beyond its control and heading toward a "Viet Nam in Africa."

The general state of United States-South African relations was discussed in many articles throughout the year. In the realm of economics, the Republic reminded the United States that trade with her produces a highly favorable balance on the American side. Figures for 1965, for example, showed $438 million in American exports going to South Africa and only $225 million in goods being imported. Moreover, between 30% and 40% of all American exports to Africa go to the Republic. Total United States investment in the Republic is reported to be between $489 million and $650 million, with all invested money bringing exceptionally high returns.

In addition to economic considerations, South Africa feels it has considerable strategic importance to the West. Both Great Britain and the United States were continually reminded in the Republic's reports that a stable, prosperous, industrially strong, and pro-Western country at the Southwestern entrance to the Indian Ocean is increasingly important to global defense. The United States was also reminded that important American space tracking stations are located in South Africa.

A final topic of special interest to the South Africans was Rhodesia. The policy of both the Verwoerd and the Vorster Governments was that the issue of Rhodesia is a domestic one between Britain and Rhodesia. The Republic deprecated the intervention of others and promised to continue normal relations with both disputants and to support no boycotts. On this subject, Dr. Verwoerd, before his death, declared that "If Britain, a great friend of the United States, can continue to supply Cuba and Viet Nam, then it is much more natural for South Africa to continue normal trade with her immediate neighbor."

Spain

The Embassy of Spain, 2700 Fifteenth Street, N.W., Washington, D.C., distributes Spanish Newsletter, a monthly magazine, and Espana Semanal, a weekly newsletter in Spanish.

Spain's great economic surge forward in the past decade occupied center stage in the material distributed here. Major statistics, most of which were for 1965, included the following: per capita income rose in 1965 to nearly $600.00, thereby passing the $500.00 mark which economists regard as separating underdevelopment from development. Total growth from 1961 through 1965 was said to be 57.9%, a rate of growth higher than that of most developed or developing countries. Also showing a substantial rise were trade figures: in 1965, Spain imported $527 million worth of goods from the United States alone, an increase of 50% over 1964. During the same period, however, Spain exported only $130 million to the United States, and an increase in her exports to this country is very much desired. Foreign investment was also encouraged during the year, and reportedly was greatly stimulated by reforms in Spanish fiscal policy begun in 1964. American companies, in particular, were reported to be beginning operations in Spain in ever-increasing numbers.

The Spaniards made mention in several publications of the continuing Spanish-United States program of cooperation in space investigation. In this regard, they particularly noted that Spain is one of the four countries of the world chosen by NASA for communications stations to carry out the Apollo moon project.

Also receiving attention in many publications were measures undertaken to liberalize the Spanish Government. According to Embassy reports, overwhelming public approval was given in December to the new Constitutional Law aimed at liberalizing basic political institutions of Spain. Included in the law are provisions establishing the posts of Premier and Vice Presidents to serve under the head of state, democratizing the Spanish Parliament, and establishing the principle of religious freedom.

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

Five registered organizations disseminated printed material emanating from the Soviet Union in 1966. Four Continent Book Corporation, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City, was engaged in selling books, including both the recently written and Communist classics. It also processed subscriptions for Soviet magazines and newspapers, as did Imported Publications and Products, 1 Union Square, New York City. Periodicals handled by the two firms included Moscow News, a weekly newspaper (327); New Times, a weekly news magazine (260); International Affairs, a monthly journal (232); Soviet Union (122); Soviet Woman (10), and Culture and Life (66), monthly pictorial magazines; Soviet Literature (20), and Sovietisch Heimland (1,040), monthly literary magazines in English and Hebrew respectively; Soviet Military Review (121), a monthly magazine; and a number of Russian language magazines such as Azia i Afrika Sevodnia, Krokidil, Ogonek, Novy Mir, and Kommunist.

Cross World Books and Periodicals, 333 South Wacker Drive, Chicago, Illinois, and Philip Frankfeld, dba New Era Books, New York City, who terminated his registration in August 1966, engaged in book sales.

Eastern News Distributors, Inc., 155 West 15th Street, New York City, distributed Moscow News (9,475 copies) and Soviet Film, a monthly film magazine (3,000 copies) and arranged at the end of the year to distribute the new Soviet magazine Sputnik.

The year 1966 marked the beginning of a new Five Year Plan for the Soviet Union, and many of their publications discussed aspects of the Plan. According to government reports, "the entire development of the Soviet economy has one aim--to increase the living standards of the people." In line with this goal, the production of consumer goods is expected to grow considerably in the next five years. Quality will also be emphasized in order that Soviet commodities may correspond to world standards and thus have enhanced export possibilities. National income is expected to rise by 38% to 41%, and popular welfare is to be improved by simultaneous increases in monetary incomes and reductions of retail prices.

Particular attention in the new plan is given to agriculture, and the Soviets hope to overcome to a considerable degree the present lags in farm production and in the farmer's welfare. In the factories, meanwhile, the workers are promised an increased role in management as part of the economic reform decentralizing industrial control and putting more responsibility for production on individual factories.

The importance of expanded trade to the Soviet Union was emphasized throughout the year. Increased trade contacts are reportedly desired with all areas of the world, including the capitalist countries. In regard to trade relations with the emerging nations, numerous articles contrasted "capitalist" versus "communist" policies. The capitalist West was said to desire to perpetuate colonialism in the developing states by preserving them as suppliers of low-priced raw materials and by cutting short their every attempt to break into the world market with manufactured products. The Soviet Union, on the other hand, was said to assist in these nation's development of industries and to engage only in trade beneficial to both sides.

On the world scene in 1966, the Soviet Union saw itself as constituting "the main force standing guard over world peace and the independence of peoples." The general line of their reasoning was as follows: the Socialist states do not intend to "export revolution," since Socialism will be victorious through the example of its successes. The Soviet defense build-up accordingly is said to be aimed at averting war rather than waging it.

In contrast, the Soviet line goes on, the United States employs its military power to suppress the attempts of other peoples to win their national freedom or to act independently, as evidenced most clearly in Viet Nam. This United States policy, it is claimed, is supported by the West German revenge seekers who back the United States in exchange for Washington's support for their acquisition of nuclear arms.

The ultimate goal of this alliance, according to the Soviets, is the establishment of U.S.-West German domination in Western Europe under the guise of protecting the continent from the "Soviet threat."

In Africa meanwhile, the Soviets declare, the United States uses the Central Intelligence Agency, based in the "racist" countries of the Republic of South Africa, Rhodesia, and the Portuguese colonies, to plot the overthrow of liberated African states and the establishment of American ascendancy.

Soviet publications promised that the U.S.S.R. would strive to counter these American plots and to aid the cause of anti-imperialism in any way it could. Continuing assistance to North Viet Nam in its struggle against United States aggression was particularly pledged. In this regard, the Soviet Government declared that North Viet Nam's "Four Points" are the only correct basis for settling the Vietnamese problems.

The Soviet Union spared no attacks on its former ally, Red China. Chairman Mao was accused of setting up a tyrannical personality cult of himself and of flagrantly contradicting Leninist teachings. In addition, Mao's refusal to cooperate with the other socialist countries was said to be the main obstacle in the path of resistance to American imperialism.

The expressed pride of the Soviet Union in 1966 was its achievement of man's first soft landing on the moon--by Luna 9--and the consequent earth-moon radio link-up. This success was termed an important step in sending the first manned space vehicle to the moon.

Yugoslavia

The Yugoslav Information Center, 816 Fifth Avenue, New York City, distributes Yugoslav News Bulletin and Yugoslav Facts and Views, intermittent news sheets (2,000); Yugoslav Life, a monthly newspaper (300); and a number of booklets.

A matter of vital concern to the Yugoslavs at the present time is development of their foreign trade. Publications throughout the year indicated that the pace of future economic advance and industrial development in Yugoslavia depends on the strengthening of her foreign trade relations.

In 1965, the United States took first place in Yugoslavia's exports for the first time in several years. Europe now accounts for about 70% of Yugoslav imports and 75% of exports; however, Information Office material indicated that expansion of trade with Asia and Africa in the last few years has been remarkable. Such trade, these sources noted, was accompanied by Yugoslav technical assistance and liberal granting of credits. In this area, the efforts of Yugoslavia were said to be linked with the international programs of the industrially developed countries, and especially with those of the United Nations and its economic organizations.

In discussions of the shortcomings of the present Yugoslav economic structure, official publications described past examples of large-scale mismanagement of investments largely due to political "pork-barrel" considerations, and stressed the need for consolidation of existing facilities rather than for new investments. The major evils requiring eradication were said to be chauvinism, nationalism, and localism in each separate Republic.

Commenting on the world situation at the beginning of the year, the Yugoslav Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Marko Nikezic, declared that "Ending the war in Viet Nam is today's most urgent task . . . . The establishment of peace, along with the withdrawal of foreign military forces, and respect for the rights of the Vietnamese people to determine their own future, would lessen the bitterness in international relations, and open the possibility of a common search for a solution of the real problems of our time--disarmament, effective help to developing countries, and the building of trust . . . between the great powers and among all states." In further statements on the Viet Nam war, Mr. Nikezic re-emphasized the Yugoslav belief that it is both necessary and possible to find a political solution based on the Geneva Agreements, but to do so will require sincere efforts and a great measure of responsibility and patience on the part of both sides. With regard to United States actions in particular, he urged that there be cessation of the bombing of North Viet Nam and of the sending of troop reinforcements. Mr. Nikezic also strongly urged that the United States eradicate any doubt of its willingness to ultimately withdraw its armed forces from the South.

Yugoslavia's own foreign policy was characterized in many publications as one of "non-alignment." The essence of this policy was said to be avoidance of disputes between the two major powers, and "support for the struggle against colonialism and for the free and comprehensive development of every nation."

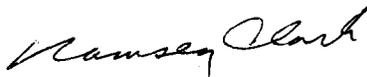

Several articles welcomed increased cooperation between the United States and Yugoslavia in the fields of education, science, and culture through such programs as teacher exchanges and inter-university cooperation.

The principal purpose of Congress in enacting the Foreign Agents Registration Act was to require public disclosure by persons engaging in propaganda activities and other activities for or on behalf of foreign governments, foreign political parties, and other foreign principals, so that the Government and the people of the United States may be informed of the identity of such persons and may appraise their statements and actions in the light of their associations and activities. The emphasis of the Department of Justice in its administration of the statute has been toward the achievement of this purpose. In performing its functions, the Department has continued to rely upon its normal sources of information and upon the investigative efforts of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Registration under the Act does not imply recognition by the United States Government either of the de jure existence or legality of the foreign principal, nor does registration indicate approval by the United States Government of the propaganda material disseminated by the registered agent.

Respectfully submitted,

Attorney General
